Fire Wise planting project helps communities prepare for future bushfires

A community nursery powered by volunteers is working to strengthen the resilience of the local Fleurieu Peninsula landscape.

The recent Deep Creek National Park fire on South Australia's Fleurieu Peninsula – the worst fire emergency in the area since the Ash Wednesday bushfires in 1983 – is a stark reminder of the impact bushfires can have on communities and the environment.

The event also highlighted the role local action plays in reducing fire risk and supporting recovery after a fire has passed.

On the Fleurieu Coast, a community nursery powered by volunteers is growing tens of thousands of native plants each year to strengthen the resilience of local landscapes.

Located within the District Council of Yankalilla area, the Fleurieu Coast Community Nursery is supporting revegetation projects while contributing to new research into plants that can help reduce bushfire impacts.

MAYOR'S MESSAGE

I recently had the pleasure of meeting with Senator Charlotte Walker to discuss how we can strengthen collaboration between all levels of government. Our conversation focused on financial sustainability and ensuring future investment aligns with Council's Strategic Community Plan 2030 and Partnership Prospectus.

Together with our regional partners, we've identified key priorities to support sustainable growth and liveability across the Southern and Hills region. These include infrastructure to support housing, fairer funding for local roads, investment in transport and digital connectivity, and long-term support for climate resilience and environmental protection. Council will continue advocating strongly to ensure our community's needs are recognised in future government decisions.

Mayor Darryl Houston with Senator Charlotte Walker.

Regional issues were also front of mind at the recent South Australian Regional Organisation of Councils meeting. Discussions covered a range of important topics, including drought support, climate-ready housing, planning for future growth, and the need to ensure local government is well supported to meet increasing responsibilities. These forums are valuable in ensuring councils can work together and speak with a united voice on matters that impact our communities.

Closer to home, I had the honour of serving as a judge for the Lions Youth of the Year program. The calibre of young people involved was outstanding, with each participant demonstrating remarkable confidence, leadership and a strong commitment to their community. It's always inspiring to see the next generation stepping forward, and it gives me great confidence in the future of our region.

As always, I appreciate the opportunity to represent our community and will continue working to ensure our district remains a great place to live, work and visit.

Warm Regards,
Darryl Houston
Mayor

CEO'S CORNER

Over the past few months, our staff and Elected Members have worked closely to develop the Draft Annual Business Plan & Budget 2026–27, alongside the Draft 2026–36 Long-Term Financial Plan and Draft Summary Asset Management Plan. I'm pleased to share that these documents are now available for community consultation.

Are they perfect? No. Will they please everyone? Also, no. These plans have been developed in a challenging economic environment and like most households and businesses, Council is navigating rising costs and increasing pressures. There are no simple choices, and careful decisions are required to balance service delivery, infrastructure needs and financial responsibility while keeping a clear focus on the future.

As one of Council's most important documents, the Draft Annual Business Plan & Budget seeks to strike that balance. It outlines the broad range of services we deliver across our district and confirms the projects we are prioritising for the year ahead. It brings together our long-term planning and translates this into a practical, one-year plan focused on maintaining essential services, renewing critical infrastructure and supporting long-term financial sustainability. Throughout the process, we have worked to continue delivering the services the community needs and expects, while managing costs as carefully as possible. I can attest to this being a challenging balancing act.

Community consultation is a vital part of this process. I encourage you to take the time to review the Draft Plans and share your feedback. Your input helps ensure Council's final decisions reflect the needs and priorities of our community.

There are several ways to get involved, you can visit www.yoursayyankalilla.com.au/abp-budget-2026-27 to provide feedback online, attend a drop-in session, present your views at the public meeting or make a written submission. Consultation closes Tuesday 19 May 2026, and I look forward to reviewing the diverse perspectives of our community.

Looking ahead, I would also like to highlight that Local Government elections will be held later this year. This election will be slightly different for our district, with a legislatively mandated change to having a publicly elected Mayor. This means voters will receive two ballot papers, one to elect Elected Members for their ward and one to elect the Mayor.

Local Government plays an important role in shaping our community, and I encourage anyone with an interest in contributing to consider nominating. Being a councillor is both a rewarding and challenging opportunity to make a meaningful difference at a local level. Nominations will open in late August and there is some great information on the dedicated election platform of the LGA website to help anyone understand the commitment required to be successful in the role. The work forms part of the Fire Wise project, delivered through the Landscape Resilience program run by the Foundation for National Parks and Wildlife. The program operates across 10 local government areas in South Australia, Victoria and New South Wales and examines how indigenous plants with lower flammability can improve the resilience of homes, gardens and natural landscapes in bushfire-prone regions.

Launched in 2018, the Fleurieu Coast Community Nursery focuses on growing local native plants for coastal revegetation. These plantings support biodiversity, rebuild habitat and assist species recovery across the region.

Funding from the Foundation for National Parks and Wildlife, Green Adelaide and the District Council of Yankalilla has allowed the nursery to expand significantly. Today, around 20 volunteers from the Fleurieu Environment Centre help propagate approximately 40,000 plants each year for projects across the Fleurieu Peninsula.

Southern Coastal Conservation Officer Corey Jackson said the volunteers are central to the nursery's success. "We grow around 40,000 plants each year, and most of that is made possible by volunteers," he said.

The nursery produces a wide range of indigenous plants suited to the Fleurieu Coast environment. Many of these plants are used in coastal revegetation projects to restore native vegetation, improve wildlife habitat and stabilise fragile dune systems.

Through the Fire Wise project, the nursery team has expanded its focus to investigate plants that may also help reduce bushfire risk.

The project explored and tested a range of local species to understand how they behave during bushfires. Volunteers and researchers compiled the findings into a Fire Wise plant guide to assist councils and the community when choosing plants for gardens, landscapes, properties and revegetation plantings.

Jackson said the work took on new significance after the Deep Creek Fire earlier this year.

"Different types of vegetation burnt differently," he said. "Because of the grant, our volunteers were able to research the plants that survived the fire and put together a booklet that lists all the Fire Wise plants."

Observations from the fire showed that some native plants can slow the spread of fire or regenerate quickly after it passes through.

"We've had a big focus on native grasses, and in photos we can see how the fire actually went around them," Jackson said. "Some of them did burn, but they re-shot soon after."

The project also highlighted the role residential gardens can play in the spread of weeds and fire risk.

Jackson said community awareness is an important part of the program. "One of the biggest findings was that many of the weeds we fight in the environment come from people's gardens," he said.

To support local residents, the nursery team runs regular community workshops and events. These include seed collecting days, plant propagation sessions, revegetation planting activities and educational seminars on native gardening.

The workshops help residents choose appropriate plants for their properties and understand how native vegetation supports wildlife, reduces weed spread and strengthens landscape resilience.

The work also delivers important environmental benefits for local species. Revegetation efforts across the Fleurieu Coast are helping restore habitat for birds, insects and other wildlife while rebuilding plant communities damaged by fire, weeds and historic land clearing.

With thousands of plants grown each year and a growing network of volunteers involved, the Fleurieu Coast Community Nursery continues to play an important role in restoring the region's natural environment and preparing the landscape for future bushfire challenges.

Gazania Free Garden Plant Swap

Ready to Get Your Hands in the Earth?

Do you have gazanias in your coastal garden? Now is the perfect time to remove them and replace them with something better.

The District Council of Yankalilla, City of Victor Harbor, Alexandrina Council, Green Adelaide and Landscapes Hills & Fleurieu have partnered to bring you a Gazania Free Garden Plant Swap, a community event supporting healthier gardens and a healthier environment.

Gazanias are a declared weed that spreads rapidly, smothering native plants and reducing habitat for local wildlife. By removing them from your garden, you're helping protect our region's natural landscapes and we'd love to reward you for it!

DECLARED
WEED

If you live in, or own a home or business within, the District Council of Yankalilla, City of Victor Harbor or Alexandrina Council areas, you can take part in this free event and swap your removed gazanias for local native plants that are waterwise, resilient and attractive to birds, butterflies and other wildlife.

What you need to do

1. Carefully remove gazanias from your garden (whether it's a single plant or a whole patch).
2. Take a photo of the gazanias you removed.
3. Dispose of them responsibly into your green organics bin (don't dump or transport weeds elsewhere).
4. Come along, show us your photo and swap it for a bucket of free local native plants suited to your garden.

What you'll receive

You'll head home with:

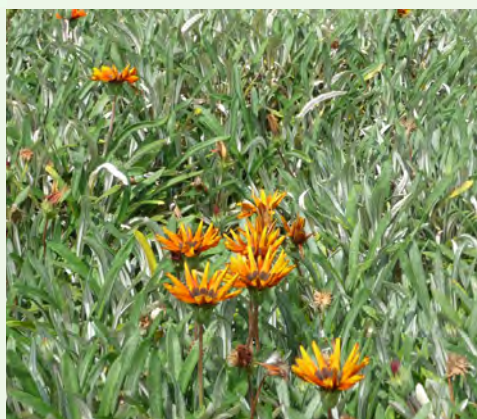

- A bucket of free local native coastal plants
- A Coastal Gardens: Planting Guide
- A Gazania Free Garden sticker for your green organics bin

Why it matters

Gazanias are a high-priority weed in coastal areas, identified through the Southern Fleurieu Coastal Action Plan. They spread easily from gardens into nearby reserves and dunes, where they outcompete native vegetation.

Native coastal plants play an important role in supporting biodiversity by providing food, shelter and habitat for local wildlife. Removing gazanias from your garden helps protect these ecosystems and contributes to broader, coordinated weed control efforts across the region.

Every gazania removed makes a difference.

Food Safety

With the Environmental Health Officer

How to cook meat and poultry safely

Food Safety (Please use Food Safety Whole pieces of meat, such as steak, beef, pork and lamb, can be cooked to taste (rare, medium-rare or well done) as long as the outside of the meat is fully cooked to kill external bacteria.

Meats that are mechanically tenderised, marinated and moisture-enhanced are an exception, as bacteria can be introduced into the meat during the processing, and they should be treated the same way as stuffed, rolled or minced meats.

Always cook chicken, rolled and stuffed meats, tenderised, marinated and moisture-enhanced meats, sausages and minced meat, such as hamburger patties and sausages, so that in the centre of the thickest part the temperature reaches 75°C.

This is because food poisoning bacteria can be present all the way through these types of meat products, as well as on the surface and only thorough cooking will kill them.

To check whether these foods have been sufficiently cooked to 75°C, you need to use a meat thermometer.

Meat thermometers are available from good kitchen shops, BBQ outlets and some hardware stores, ranging in price from between $12 to $40 or more.

In the upper price range, digital thermometers can be easier to read and those with fine, sensitive tips can be more accurate. Using a thermometer to test when food is cooked not only ensures safe food, but it also avoids guessing and ensures you cook your food to perfection every time.

To test the temperature, the thermometer probe should be inserted in the thickest part of the meat, such as the thigh on poultry, not touching bone or gristle, which can give a false reading.

Meat thermometers that are to be left in the oven or hooded BBQ while the meat is cooking have to be heat-resistant.

Always carefully read the instructions before using a meat thermometer and remember that meat thermometer probes should be thoroughly cleaned each time they are used to check the temperature while cooking, so as not to transfer contamination, after use and before storage.
